STATISTICS OF 1851:

SHIP BUILDING.

NUMBER AND DESCRIPTION OF VESSELS LAUNCRED DURING THE PAST YEAR, AND NOW CONSTRUCTING IN THE NEW YORK CHIP YARDS. Below will be found a statement of the number of vessels completed in the New York ship yards during the past year, and also those now or the stocks.

It will be seen that the number launched the year exceeds by seventeen that of 1850, and that the vessels on the stocks at the close of 1850 exceed by seven those on the stocks now. The tonnage of the vessels completed in 1851, and building at the close of that year, shows a falling off of 7,558 tons.

as compared with 1850.

The business doing at the various yards, although not so large as at the close of 1850, is pretty active, it having now quietly settled down into its regular and legitimate channel, from which it was tempoarily turned by the active demand for vestels for the California market.

The demand for clipper ships is still large, in proportion to the number built. Many most splendid additions to the American clipper fleet left this port during the past year for San Francisco and other ports; and a great many, equally magnificent, now on the Stocks, will shortly follow in their wake.
The proportion of steam vessels to sailing vessels is also large, there being fifty of the former to fiftyfive of the latter. There is no doubt this propor tionate number of steamers will be still greater increased as the land facilities for conveying passengers and goods on the various routes to California, across Central America, become further developed. The first builder on our list is
